New & Improved

THE BEST CHRISTMAS EVER

Christmas was going to be different this year. The father called a family conference and challenged them to be more disciplined in the management of their time during the busy Christmas season and to curtail excessive spending on gifts. He talked about better relations between visiting relatives and a more congenial atmosphere around their home. He brought his speech to a crescendo with his final rally cry, "Let's make this the best Christmas EVER!"

His little second-grade son countered the big motivational speech by noting, "But Dad, I don't see how we could ever improve on the first Christmas." We certainly can't improve on what happened that first Christmas, but we can improve on the way we celebrate it today.
